This supplement implements AFPD 63-1, The Acquisition System. This supplement applies to A&AS and Other Professional and Technical Services contracts. Surveillance requirements apply when the place of performance for the effort is at the center or laboratory where the contract is awarded or other government installation.

SUMMARY OF REVISIONS

Revisions establish PBSC requirements for Advisory and Assistance Services (A&AS) and Other Professional and Technical Services contracts.

AFI 63-124, 1 April 1999, is supplemented as follows:

1.2.3. Center/AFRL Commanders:

1.2.5. The Senior Center Contracting Official (SCCO) ensures that Business Requirements and Advisory Groups (BRAG) are established. BRAGs are essentially joint functional teams that support accomplishment of many tasks listed in the Air Force instruction. The BRAG is intended to be a flexible group whose size and organizational structure may be unique for specific contracts and centers or AFRL. BRAGs are encouraged to use resources available through their local Acquisition Support Teams (AST).

1.2.5.3. Also support query activities and completion of Determination/Decision Documents (DDD) for A&AS requirements.

1.2.5.7. Brief the SCCO as required.

1.2.6. SCCOs:

1.2.6.1. Perform duties as the Center or Laboratory Business Advisor to include updating the Center or Laboratory Commander on the health of the Center or Laboratory A&AS and Other Professional and Technical Services contract program.

4.1.7. The Chief of the Contracting Office (COCO) on a case-by-case basis may approve use of an award fee plan in lieu of a Quality Assurance Surveillance Plan (QASP). The award fee plan must provide for comparable surveillance of services. Develop a limited QASP to cover particular areas not suitable for inclusion in the award fee plan.
